"To hell with" World Press Freedom Day

Former Prasa boss Lucky Montana has threatened violence against a former News24 journalist who revealed that his R13.5m property was partly funded with money that can be traced back to a beneficiary of dodgy contracts worth R4bn from the Passenger Rail Agency of South Africa (PRASA). Pieter-Louis Myburgh wrote a story on April 30 explaining how money from controversial Pretoria tender mogul Mario Ferreira found its way to his former business partner before the latter used it to buy a sprawling property of not more than 6000m<sup>2</sup> in the sought after Johannesburg suburb of Hurlingham.

Montana tweeted: "I 've been writing a lot to respond to this idiot. I asked him the questions to demonstrate there's no substance to what he writes other than a personal vendetta. I will no longer entertain him. The next step is to search for this guy around JHB and beat the hell out of him."

Fellow journalists reacted with disbelief to Montana's threat, viewing his tweet as a threat to media freedom.
(Mxolisi Mngadi, News24)

Mbombela- The community of Newscom is threatening to embark on protest action should the Mbombela Local Municipality fail to address their complaints about an illegal dump site from which unsupervised children eat rotting food every day.

The Newscom residents allege that people from neighbouring communities throw household and garden waste from a small bridge at the dump site. They say unsupervised children are at a greater risk as they have been seen eating some of the discarded food. "We call this place our small free supermarket," a seven year old said.

"We burn the waste products and smoke affects the community for approximately two weeks or so," said a resident, Moses Ngubane. Ngubane also said residents have run out of patience and are now threatening to hold a massive protest should they hear nothing from the municipality.

(Constance Sithole, News24 correspondent)

QUESTION FIVE

Read the article below.

Sarah Attar received a standing ovation from the crowds when she finished last in a women's 800 m heat at the London Olympic Games in 2012. Even though her performance was nothing sensational, just the fact that she was there was cause for celebration.

She was the first woman athlete ever to represent Saudi Arabia in a track and field event at the Olympic Games and it was a great breakthrough for all female athletes from this ultra-conservative country.

"This is such a huge honour and an amazing experience, just to be representing the women," Attar said. "I know that this can make a huge difference."

(Article from Oxford Successful Life Orientation.)

a) Bell rings for each class

You have to be your own time keeper; there are no bells. Your lecturers don't force you to attend class. You may get a letter to say you can't write exams because you did not attend enough classes.

b) Teacher takes a register - attendance is compulsory

You have to make your own notes, buy textbooks and ask ahead of time if you need help.

c) Teachers give you lots of notes, summaries, free textbooks, and extra help.

You may have to live far away from home for eg. a hostel, rented room or with a family.

d) You usually live at home, near home or in a school hostel.

You have to sort out your own meals, clothes and laundry.

e) Usually your family feeds and clothes you.

2.3 The journalists was threatened with physical violence for reporting. Some journalists will be afraid to report on fraud and corruption as they fear for their safety. ✓

This could result in information being withheld from the citizens. ✓ (2x2 = 4)

2.4 Most media make money from advertisements and sponsors. The media therefore aim to satisfy the interests of the public. The media may withhold information or give biased reports, to satisfy their sponsors. ✓

News entertains rather than informs. Some media are filled with gossip, scandals, sex and violence rather than facts. ✓

Political news is more about personalities than about politicians' works and contributions. The media publicise the scandalous private lives of politicians and their families, which have nothing to do with their work. ✓

2.4. continued.

The lives of famous stars are made difficult by the paparazzi who invade their privacy. The media are like vultures when celebrities are in trouble. They persecute rather than protect them. ✓

The media sometimes exaggerate dangers and make people afraid for no reason. ✓

news and interpretations of events may be biased, incomplete or incorrect. ✓

The information in the printed press, radio etc has been selected from a large pool of information. Somebody, somewhere, made a decision on what was necessary to tell the public and what was not necessary. ✓

( $3 \times 2 = 6$ )

(total 15)

Question 3

3.1. The children are living in poverty. They are hungry and enter the dump sites to find food. The children are eating rotting food. ( $3 \times 1 = 3$ )

3.3. Eating rotten food can lead to food poisoning. ✓
It becomes a haven for criminal activities. ✓

- * Crime rate increases. People who are unemployed get desperate, will do anything for money. They will even steal to survive. With a criminal record, it becomes more difficult to find employment. ✓
- * The longer unemployed, the higher the risk of substance abuse; They may become violent towards family members
(accept any other relevant response) (3x2=6)

43 Volunteering: You help others, give off your time and skills to others. This builds confidence. Allows you to explore your interests, abilities and skills. This might make it easier for you to choose a career.

Part-time jobs - You can gain a lot of experience through part time jobs. You will build good experience, and become skilled in different aspects of work. You will earn an income while you build your CV.

Community work: The work is usually paid for by the government or an NGO, or a religious-based organisation. You do something to benefit your community or a community in need.

Entrepreneurship: You see a need and provide a service or goods that people need. This is a great way to earn money while you look for other work opportunities. If your entrepreneurship leads to success, you may turn this into your day-to-day job and also employ others.

Informal jobs are usually short term. Some people prefer informal employment due to its flexible hours. The flexible hours allow them to balance family responsibilities. Other people find that this is the only work they can do to survive.

$$[ \text{any } 3 - 3 \times 2 = 6 ]$$

Question Five

5.1 Having a healthy body prevents many illnesses associated with being unfit, such as diabetes and heart condition. Concentrate and think better, exercise helps your brain to function better /

Physical fitness promotes a better quality of life (good health)
(accept any other relevant response) (3x1=3)

5.2 The traditional role of men and women - men are viewed as strong / masculine / breadwinners. Women are viewed as feminine / weak. Women are discouraged from participating in so-called mens sport.

Women don't get adequate coverage and sponsorship because they don't adhere to the dress code. for example female tennis players who wear shorts instead of mini skirts have been severely criticised and have lost sponsorships women are often marginalised - In some cultures women are restricted when it comes to what they can wear. This means they are absent from other sport. eg. Iranian women athletes do well in international events such as karate and volleyball. However, they are absent from swimming and gymnastics.

accept any other relevant response (3x2=6)

5.3 Support women's athletics at any age, community should attend sporting events.

coach, athletes, fans, including all stakeholders should build confidence, promote women's leadership, promote gender equality, speak out against discrimination, educate / Empower the young girls at grass root level (schools) to participate in soccer, cricket etc. (3x2=6)

(accept any other relevant response)

Question 6

6.1 Acceptance of responsibilities

Responsibility means you are accountable and you do your duty. You can be trusted to do a job because you take responsibility.

If you make a mistake you apologise and you say you did it; you don't try to shift the responsibility to somebody else.

If you don't act responsibly, you let people down. They won't trust you. Effective communication can't happen where there is no trust, reliability and responsibility.

6.2 Core communication skills:

- * Know how to initiate relationships: Be friendly so that you can make friends, talk to others and listen to them. Be a good friend, show support - don't gossip - be trustworthy.
- * Communicate that you understand others by showing empathy - understand and recognise the feelings of others.
- * Show that you understand - apply your listening skills - repeat what you hear - check if you have heard understood correctly. Never interrupt - allow speaker to talk freely.
- * Communicate your feelings beliefs and attitudes: - share what you feel in appropriate ways, stay calm, polite and respectful while you give your viewpoint (3x2=6)

6.3 Attention seeker: Give others a chance; don't hog the limelight all the time. Keep quiet and listen to others, allow others a chance to express their views. Show that you respect and care about others and are willing to share the spotlight.
