QUESTION 1:  HOW DID GROWING SPHERES OF INFLUENCE IN EUROPE CONTRIBUTE TO COLD WAR TENSIONS BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA (USA) AND THE SOVIET UNION (USSR)?

SOURCE 1A

The source below explains how Europe was divided into two separate blocs after World War II.

The end of the Second World War did not signal a return to normality; on the contrary, it resulted in a new conflict. The major European powers that had been at the forefront of the international stage in the 1930s were left exhausted and ruined by the war, setting the scene for the emergence of two new global superpowers. Two blocs developed around the Soviet Union and the United States, with other countries being forced to choose between the two camps. The USSR came out of the war territorially enlarged and with an aura of prestige from having fought Hitlers Germany. The country was given a new lease of life by its heroic resistance to the enemy, exemplified by the victory at Stalingrad. The USSR also offered an ideological, economic and social model extending as never before to the rest of Europe.

The United States was the great victor of the Second World War. Its human and material losses were relatively low, and even though the US Army was almost completely demobilised a few months after the end of hostilities, the United States remained the world's leading military power. Its navy and air force were unrivalled, and until 1949 it was the only country with the capacity to produce nuclear weapons.

Each country feared the newfound power of the other. The Soviets felt surrounded and threatened by the West and accused the United States of spearheading 'imperialist expansion'. For their part, the Americans were concerned at Communist expansion and accused Stalin of breaching the Yalta Agreement on the right of free peoples to self-determination.

From 1947, Europe, divided into two blocs, was at the heart of the struggle between the two superpowers. The Cold War reached its first climax with the Soviet blockade of Berlin. The explosion of the first Soviet atomic bomb in the summer of 1949 reinforced the USSR in its role as a world power. This situation confirmed the predictions of Winston Churchill, who, in March 1946, had been the first Western statesman to speak of an 'Iron Curtain' that now divided Europe in two.

SOURCE 1B

The extract below refers to Winston Churchill's famous 'Sinews of Peace' speech delivered in 1946. Churchill, who had won the war in Europe, only to lose in the British general election in July 1945, eagerly accepted the invitation to appear on the same platform as the President of the United States.

Churchill knew that while the world looked forward to putting the horrors of war behind, events at the beginning of 1946 portended (warning sign) an even darker future ahead. In the wake of the Allied victory, the Soviet Union had begun shaping Eastern Europe in their image, bringing the governments of many nations into line with Moscow. On February 9, Premier Joseph Stalin gave a speech in which he declared that war between the East and West was inevitable (unavoidable). On February 22, the American Ambassador to Moscow, George F. Kennan, sent the famous "Long Telegram" warning of the Soviet Union's perpetual hostility towards the West.

Then, on March 5, 1946, at Westminster College in Fulton, Churchill's famous words "From Stettin in the Baltic, to Trieste in the Adriatic, an iron curtain has descended across the continent," ushered in the Cold War and framed the geo-political landscape for the next 50 years. The former Prime Minister, with President Truman at his side, articulated (expressed) the threat that the Soviet Union and communism posed to peace and stability in the post-war world. Invoking the spirit of the Atlantic Charter he called for a strengthening of Anglo-American ties and for the United Nations to become a peace-promoting world organization that would succeed where its predecessor, the League of Nations had failed.

"The Sinews of Peace," the title Churchill himself gave his address, endures today as one of the statesman's most significant speeches. It not only made the term "iron curtain" a household phrase, but it coined the term "special relationship," describing enduring alliance between the United States and Great Britain

SOURCE 1C

The extract below is from a book written by Vladislav Zubok, professor of international history, with expertise on the Cold War, the Soviet Union and Stalinism, in which he deals with Stalin's response to Churchill's 'Iron Curtain' Speech.

Winston Churchill's "Iron Curtain" speech was never published by the Soviet press -- only in May 1998 did it appear in Russian in a historical archival journal. Stalin himself informed his people about it in Pravda. He compared Churchill to Hitler and described him as "a warmonger" who aimed at "Anglo-Saxon ... racial" world domination. At the same time, he claimed that the Soviet Union, despite recent war losses, was capable of waging and winning another war. Stalin's harsh reaction was calculated, not emotional.

By the autumn of 1945, the Soviet dictator had begun preparations for a possible confrontation with the West. In addition to atomic and other military projects, he launched a campaign to disabuse (remove from) his lieutenants of any "illusions" about the West's – and Churchill's – good will.

The "Iron Curtain" speech gave him a pretext (reason) for mobilizing the Soviet people against their former allies. It was not an easy task. Many Soviets, exhausted and hungry, opted for post-war cooperation with the West – not for a closed empire from Berlin to Vladivostok. And many could not care less about a mythical "war threat" from the West. On the contrary, most Soviets remembered the U.S. Lend-Lease program, including U.S. canned food sent to their nation during the war, and hoped this assistance might continue. It was even rumoured among peasants that Western powers might "force" Stalin to disband the hated collective farms.

Those military professionals, who dreaded a combination of U.S. atomic power and British air bases around the Soviet Union, took Stalin's response to Churchill as provocative bravado (arrogance). In March 1946, Stalin for the first time purged his top brass, among them the conqueror of Berlin, Marshal Georgi Zhukov. It took many more months for Stalin to convince his people of the perceived danger from the West and to build a real "Iron Curtain" around his empire.

QUESTION 2:    WHAT WERE THE REASONS FOR THE INVOLVEMENT OF SOUTH AFRICA IN THE ANGOLAN CIVIL WAR?

SOURCE 2A

The source below is part of a memoir by Johan Du Preez, the co-author of the book, Operation Savannah. It focusses on how foreign countries became involved in Angola.

In his book, Angola – Operation Savannah 1975–1976 (Pretoria 1989), prof. F.J. du Toit Spies stated that the independence process in the Portuguese colonies of Mozambique and Guinee-Bissau went off relatively smoothly. However, in Angola a civil war broke out between three opposing freedom movements – UNITA, the FNLA and the MPLA – each wanting to be in control of the country on 11 November 1975, the date set for Portugal to leave.

Ideologies played an important role. The MPLA had a Marxist base and had the support of Russia, Cuba and other communist countries with, amongst others, with their military forces already deployed in Angola. UNITA and the FNLA leaned towards the West, receiving lesser, mainly clandestine (secret) support from America and France.

In July 1975, the internal conflict reached a critical level in favour of the MPLA. UNITA and the FNLA approached South Africa for support. Involvement by America's Central Intelligence Agency (CIA), led to the South African government agreeing to render covert (secret) military support to these two movements. As a result, the South African Defence Force (SADF) became involved in a clandestine (secret) military operation in Angola over the period July 1975 – January 1976. The campaign was known as Operation Savannah.

SOURCE 2B

The extract below, written by Christopher Saunders, a historian, highlights the reasons for the involvement of South Africa in the Angolan Civil War.

What happened after Angolan independence was of course shaped in part by earlier relations between the two countries. Prior to the Lisbon coup of April 1974, the Portuguese rulers of Angola had been close allies of apartheid South Africa, and during the 1960s and early 1970s the South African government saw Angola as a key part of the buffer of white-ruled states that separated South Africa from black-ruled Africa to the north and provided South Africa with a protective shield. South Africa had a consulate-general in Luanda, but much of the co-operation between the two countries was conducted in secret, to avoid external scrutiny. Portugal did not want to be seen to be working openly with racist South Africa and the South African government did not want its electorate (voters) to know the extent of its commitments in the Portuguese colonies.

Relations between South Africa and Angola changed dramatically as a result of the Lisbon coup of late April 1974, for though the Portuguese remained in nominal control of Angola until 11 November 1975, the country was soon riven (torn apart) by civil war and external intervention. The South African government no longer had a friendly neighbour there and was now faced with the prospect of a hostile government in Luanda once the country became independent, one that would give succour (help) and support to SWAPO and would provide bases at which MK cadres could be trained before returning to fight in South Africa. On 11 November 1975 in Luanda the MPLA proclaimed itself to be the government of an independent Angola. The US not only failed to prevent what it saw as a puppet party of the Soviet Union coming to power, the large Cuban military force now stationed in Angola was seen by both the US and the South Africans as working under the orders of Moscow and as an agent of Soviet expansionism.

To the South African government, the arrival of the Cubans, more than the advent of the MPLA regime, meant a major new threat had developed in a country in the region in which it saw itself as hegemonic (dominant). It was feared in both Pretoria and Washington that the Cubans might intervene elsewhere in the region. Politicians and bureaucrats in Pretoria, much influenced by right-wingers in the US administration, saw Moscow's aim as the take-over of all Southern Africa. In such a context, there was no question of either the US or South Africa opening diplomatic relations with newly independent Angola, and the South Africans continued to give active support to Jonas Savimbi's UNITA.

The extract below is from a speech delivered in Parliament in 1976 by the Prime Minister B.J. Vorster.

Let us now approach the matter from a different point of view. Let us ask ourselves what would have happened if South Africa had not become involved. Then, firstly, the MPLA, with Russian and Cuban help, would have taken over the whole of Angola and would have sub-jugated (conquered) the entire population. They would have had the harbours of Lobito, Mocamedes and other harbours at their disposal right at the outset. They would have had the Benguela railway line at their disposal. They would have created the impression in the outside world that the people of Angola wanted the MPLA and were well-disposed (friendly) to the MPLA.

Initially the MPLA did not disclose (reveal) the presence of the Russians and the Cubans. They concealed their presence; they did not mention them, and the Russians and the Cubans did not announce their own presence there either. They tried to create the impression that it was the MPLA that was finding favour with the people of Angola and had the support of all the people in Angola. They did this although they controlled only one-third of the population and less than one-third of the territory.

I maintain in all seriousness that South Africa's involvement exposed the Russian-Cuban involvement. Even if South Africa did nothing else, South Africa did do the free world a service in Africa by causing this to emerge very clearly. But what would have happened further? The OAU would have recognized the MPLA unanimously or with few dissenting (opposing) votes at its conference, and South Africa would have been condemned in one morning at Addis Ababa. This did not happen.

QUESTION 3:     WHAT CHALLENGES DID THE CIVIL RIGHTS ACTIVISTS FACE IN THEIR ATTEMPTS TO DESEGREGATE BIRMINGHAM?

SOURCE 3A

The source below highlights the start of the Birmingham campaign in 1963.

In April 1963, King and the Southern Christian Leadership Conference (SCLC) joined Birmingham's local campaign organized by Rev. Shuttlesworth and his group, the Alabama Christian Movement for Human Rights (ACMHR). The goal of the local campaign was to attack the city's segregation system by putting pressure on Birmingham's merchants during the Easter season, the second-biggest shopping season of the year.

The campaign was originally scheduled to begin in early March 1963 but was postponed until April. On April 3, 1963, it was launched with mass meetings, lunch counter sit-ins, a march on city hall, and a boycott of downtown merchants. King spoke to Birmingham's Black citizens about nonviolence and its methods and appealed for volunteers. When Birmingham's residents enthusiastically responded, the campaign's actions expanded to kneel-ins at churches, sit-ins at the library, and a march on the county courthouse to register voters.

On April 10, 1963, the city government obtained a state court injunction (ruling) against the protests. After debate, campaign leaders decided to disobey the court order. King contemplated whether he and Ralph Abernathy–SCLC's second-in-command–should be arrested. King decided that he must risk jail. On Good Friday, April 12, 1963, King was arrested in Birmingham after violating the anti-protest injunction and was placed in solitary confinement

The source below contains extracts from Martin Luther King's famous letter titled 'From a Birmingham jail' written on the 16th April 1963

In any non-violent campaign there are four basic steps: 1) collection of the facts to determine whether injustices are alive; 2) negotiation; 3) self-purification; and 4) direct action. We have gone through all of these steps in Birmingham … Birmingham is probably the most thoroughly segregated city in the United States. Its ugly record of police brutality is known in every section of the country. Its unjust treatment of Negros in the courts is a notorious reality. There have been more unsolved bombings of Negro homes and churches in Birmingham than in any city in this nation.

We know through painful experience that freedom is never voluntarily given by the oppressor; it must be demanded by the oppressed. Frankly I have never yet engaged in a direct-action movement that was "well timed", according to the timetable of those who have not suffered unduly from the disease of segregation.

Let us all hope that the dark clouds of racial prejudice will soon pass away and the deep fog of misunderstanding will be lifted from our fear-drenched communities and in some not too distant tomorrow the radiant stars of love and brotherhood will shine over our great nation with all of their scintillating beauty.

SOURCE 3D

The source below is an eyewitness account of Len Holt, a civil rights activist of the events that unfolded during one of the Birmingham protests in 1963.

Over the police radio I heard Bull Connor's voice. He was mad. He had been betrayed. Never before had the students demonstrated before 1 pm. I suspect the merchants were mad. And the kids downtown, all 600 of them, sang "We Shall Overcome." And they did overcome. No arrests were made. When the police finally got to the area, they merely ripped up the signs and told the youngsters to go home. The jails were full.

For the students, "home" was back to the 16th St. Baptist Church. A policeman went to the church to tell somebody from the Movement to ask the students to leave. When the announcement was made in the church, 2,000 persons went downtown. These thousands were joined by 2,000 spectators and made a wild, hilarious parade through downtown Birmingham, singing "We Shall Overcome."

Then the nearly 4,000 persons returned to the church from the "victory march." And while the throngs joyously sang inside, preparations were being made outside. The cars with dogs drove up. About 300 police officers surrounded the church and park area. Fire hoses were set up.

For a few minutes I left the area of the church and went to a nearby office. When I emerged, I saw 3,000 Negroes encircled in the Kelly-Ingram Park by policemen swinging clubs. The hoses were in action with the pressure wide open. On one side the students were confronted by clubs, on the other, by powerful streams of water. The firemen used the hoses to knock down the students. As the streams hit trees, the bark was ripped off. Bricks were torn loose from the walls. The hoses were directed at everyone with a black skin, demonstrators and non-demonstrators.

A stream of water slammed the Rev. Fred Shuttlesworth against the church wall, causing internal injuries. Mrs. Colia LaFayette, 25-year-old SNCC field secretary from Selma, Alabama, was knocked down and two fire hoses were brought to bear on her to wash her along the sidewalk.

Meanwhile, over the public address system inside the church, I could hear a speaker admonishing (advising) the people to be nonviolent. "We want to redeem the souls of people like Bull Connor."

MARKING GUIDELINE

MARKS:      150

This marking guideline consists of 28 pages.

1. SOURCE-BASED QUESTIONS

1.1 The following cognitive levels were used to develop source-based questions:

| COGNITIVE LEVELS | HISTORICAL SKILLS | WEIGHTING OF QUESTIONS |
|---|---|---|
| LEVEL 1 | • Extract evidence from sources.• Selection and organisation of relevant information from sources.• Define historical concepts/terms. | 30% (15) |
| LEVEL 2 | • Interpretation of evidence from the sources.• Explain information gathered from the sources.• Analyse evidence from the sources. | 40% (20) |
| LEVEL 3 | • Interpret and evaluate evidence from sources.• Engage with sources to determine its usefulness, reliability, bias and limitations.• Compare and contrast interpretations and perspectives presented in sources and draw independent conclusions. | 30% (15) |

1.2 The information below indicates how source-based questions are assessed:

- In the marking of source-based questions, credit needs to be given to any other valid and relevant viewpoints, arguments, evidence or examples.
- In the allocation of marks emphasis should be placed on how the requirements of the question have been addressed.
- In the marking guideline, the requirements of the question (skills that need to be addressed) as well as the level of the question are indicated in italics.
- When assessing open-ended source-based questions, learners should be credited for any relevant answers.
- Learners are expected to take a stance when answering 'to what extent' questions in order for any marks to be awarded.

1.3 Assessment procedures for source-based questions

- Use a tick (✓) for each correct answer.
- Pay attention to the mark scheme e.g. (2 x 2) which translates to two reasons and is given two marks each (✓✓✓✓); (1 x 2) which translates to one reason and is given two marks (✓✓).
- If a question carries 4 marks then indicate by placing 4 ticks (✓✓✓✓).

Paragraph question

Paragraphs are to be assessed globally (holistically). Both the content and structure of the paragraph must be taken into account when awarding a mark. The following steps must be used when assessing a response to a paragraph question:

- Read the paragraph and place a bullet ( . ) at each point within the text where the candidate has used relevant evidence to address the question.
- Re-read the paragraph to evaluate the extent to which the candidate has been able to use relevant evidence to write a paragraph.
- At the end of the paragraph indicate the ticks (√) that the candidate has been awarded for the paragraph; as well as the level (1, 2 or 3) as indicated in the holistic rubric and a brief comment e.g.

_____ · _____ · _____
√√√√ Level 2

Used mostly relevant evidence to write a basic paragraph.

- Count all the ticks for the source-based question and then write the mark on the right-hand bottom margin e.g.

$$\frac{32}{50}$$

- Ensure that the total mark is transferred accurately to the front/back cover the answer script.

2. ESSAY QUESTIONS

2.1 The essay questions require candidates to:
- Be able to structure their argument in a logical and coherent manner. They need to select, organise and connect the relevant information so that they are able to present a reasonable sequence of facts or an effective argument to answer the question posed. It is essential that an essay has an introduction, a coherent and balanced body of evidence and a conclusion.

2.2 Marking of essay questions
- Markers must be aware that the content of the answer will be guided by the textbooks in use at the particular centre.
- Candidates may have any other relevant introduction and/or conclusion than those included in a specific essay marking guideline for a specific essay.
- When assessing open-ended source-based questions, learners should be credited for _any other relevant answer_s.

2.3    Global assessment of the essay
The essay will be assessed holistically (globally).  This approach requires the teacher to score the overall product as a whole, without scoring the component parts separately.  This approach encourages the learner to offer an individual opinion by using selected factual evidence to support an argument.  The learner will not be required to simply regurgitate facts in order to achieve a high mark.  This approach discourages learners from preparing 'model' answers and reproducing them without taking into account the specific requirements of the question.  Holistic marking of the essay credits learners' opinions supported by evidence.  Holistic assessment, unlike content-based marking, does not penalise language inadequacies as the emphasis is on the following:

- The construction of an argument
- The appropriate selection of factual evidence to support such argument
- The learner's interpretation of the question.

2.4    Assessment procedures of the essay

2.4.1    Keep the synopsis in mind when assessing the essay.

2.4.2    During the reading of the essay ticks need to be awarded for a relevant introduction (indicated by a bullet in the marking guideline/memorandum), each of the main points/aspects that is properly contextualised (also indicated by bullets in the marking guideline/memorandum) and a relevant conclusion (indicated by a bullet in the marking guideline/memorandum) e.g. in an answer where there are 5 main points there will be 7 ticks.

2.4.3    Keep the PEEL structure in mind when assessing an essay.

| P | Point:  The candidate introduces the essay by taking a line of argument/making a major point. |
|---|---|
| E | Explanation:  The candidate should explain in more detail what the main point is all about and how it relates to the question posed (line of argument). |
| E | Example:  The candidates should answer the question by selecting content that is relevant to the line of argument. Relevant examples should be given to sustain the line of argument. |
| L | Link:  Candidates should ensure that the line of argument is sustained throughout the essay and is written coherently. |

5

2.4.4   The following symbols MUST be used when assessing an essay:

- Introduction, main aspects and conclusion not properly contextualised

  ^

- Wrong statement          _____

- Irrelevant statement          |
                                 |
                                 |

- Repetition          R

- Analysis          A√
- Interpretation          I√

- Line of argument          LOA          ↕

2.5   The matrix

2.5.1   Use of the matrix in the marking of essays

In the marking of essays, the criteria as provided in the matrix should be used.  When assessing the essay note both the content and presentation.  At the point of intersection of the content and presentation based on the seven competency levels, a mark should be awarded.

(a)   The first reading of essays will be to determine to what extent the main aspects have been covered and to allocate the content level (on the matrix).

| | | |

(b)   The second reading of essays will relate to the level (on the matrix) of presentation.

| C | LEVEL 4 | |
|---|---------|---|
| P | LEVEL 3 | |

(c)   Allocate an overall mark with the use of the matrix.

| C | LEVEL 4 | }26–27 |
|---|---------|--------|
| P | LEVEL 3 | |

COMMENT
Some omissions in content coverage.
Attempts to sustain a line of argument.

SECTION B: ESSAY QUESTIONS

QUESTION 4: THE EXTENSION OF THE COLD WAR: CASE STUDY – VIETNAM

[Plan and construct an original argument based on relevant evidence using analytical and interpretative skills.]

SYNOPSIS
Candidates should explain whether they agree or disagree that "Although the Viet Cong were out gunned by the United States of America, they were smarter and had more to fight for in Vietnam". They should support their line of argument with relevant historical evidence.

MAIN ASPECTS
Candidates should include the following aspects in their response:

Introduction: Candidates should take a stance by indicating whether they agree or disagree that "Although the Viet Cong were out gunned by the United States of America, they were smarter and had more to fight for in Vietnam". They should also provide an outline of how they would support their line of argument.

ELABORATION
Focus on the strategies used by both the USA and the Vietcong

- Conditions immediately before the war:
- The division of Vietnam and the formation of the Vietcong
- Reasons for USA involvement: containment and domino theory
- USA's first intervention in South Vietnam was to send weapons and military advisors between 1957 and 1965 – first phase against the Vietcong (Vietnamese communist)
- Ho Chi Minh Trail was used by the Vietminh (communist guerrillas from North Vietnam) to support the Vietcong – Helped to supply the Vietcong with food and weapons.
- Under Kennedy the USA used their resources to introduce 'Safe Village' policy/Hamlet strategy/Villagisation – trying to isolate/separate guerrillas from villagers (1963)
- Safe village policy failed because the Vietcong operated inside villages (Smarter)
- Lyndon Johnson and The Gulf of Tonkin incident and resolution (1964)
- The USA relied on modern technology for a conventional war (They were not prepared for the unconventional warfare tactics)
- USA sent 3 500 marines on 8 March 1965 and ground troops to Vietnam/ conventional military strategy were confused by guerrilla tactics (Smarter tactics)
- Operation Ranch Hand (1962 – 1971) – use of chemical defoliants (Agent Orange to destroy the forest) and Agent Blue (to destroy agricultural products and food to weaken the Vietcong)
➢ The dense vegetation was used to the Vietcong's advantage (Smarter)
- Use of chemical weapons made USA unpopular, and many countries condemned the USA
- President Johnson introduced Operation Rolling Thunder in March 1965 hoping to eliminate the Vietcong in a matter of weeks

- Guerrilla warfare by the Vietminh and Vietcong (difficulty in separating guerrillas from villagers – farmers/peasants)
- Vietcong responded with the Tet Offensive (1968) – successful surprised attacks on 100 cities controlled by the USA
- Number of USA soldiers killed increased - led to anti-war demonstrations
- USA sent young and inexperienced soldiers to Vietnam – modern weapons could not assist due to inexperience of young USA soldiers
- USA used modern weapons for search and destroy missions (better Weapons)
- (My Lai massacre) to destroy villages supported by Vietcong - This resulted in large numbers of civilian deaths – which called for more support for the Vietcong
- USA atrocities and My Lai massacre (March 1968) turned public opinion against the war
- North Vietnam received military support from the USSR and China so the Vietminh and Vietcong also had access to some modern weapons
- Guerrilla warfare was effectively used by the Vietcong, supported by Vietminh from the north and used tactics such as booby traps, underground tunnels, hit and run, sabotage
- ➢ American Soldiers very quickly lost their moral to fight
- ➢ Not fighting for a cause / Unlike the Vietnamese (More to fight for)
- The Vietcong increased its support base because of the tactics used against the USA soldiers
- The Vietnamese were united in the defence of their country (more to fight for)
- Vietnamisation: President Nixon came up with the policy of strategic withdrawal from Vietnam.
- Also called WHAM (Winning the Hearts and Minds of the Vietnamese) signalled the failure of USA to stop Vietnam from becoming a communist state and its subsequent withdrawal
- USA withdrew all troops by 1973 (President Nixon had signed the Paris Peace Accords on 27 January 1973 – ending USA involvement in the Vietnam war

- Any other relevant response
- Conclusion:  Candidates should tie up their arguments with relevant conclusion.          [50]

- Belgium did not prepare for the proper transition of a new leadership take over Congo became independent on 30 June 1960 with Joseph Kasavubu as President and Patrice Lumumba as Prime Minister.
- Kasavubu preferred that Congo be a federal state while Lumumba was for a strong centralised national government/Lumumba also in conflict with Moise Tshombe
- The newly independent Congo started with lots of political instability, e.g. Tshombe focused on secession of Katanga for its own independence – a sign for the need of strong political policies
- Mobutu seized power from Kasavubu through a coup d'état in 1965
- He applied authoritarianism to achieve political stability (begging of a one party state)
- In 1967 Mobutu managed to stop the Katanga rebellion and gave his country a new constitution as a one party-state under his party, the Popular Movement for the Revolution (MPR)
- Congo became a one-party state within the first five years after gaining independence with all opposition suppressed (authoritarian)
- Mobutu developed a state ideology (Mobutuism) self-centred leadership – (ensuring that Congo was a one-party state)
- Mobutuism made Congo an autocratic state under himself as a military dictator (poor leadership)
- He was supported by the USA because he was seen as an anti-communist ally
- He created a strong centralised government and controlled all appointments, promotions and the allocation of government revenue – led to nepotism

- Any other relevant response

- Mobutu inherited: a capitalist economy (from Belgium)
- Economy in the hands of white settlers and foreigners
- Economy rich in natural resources: copper, cobalt, diamonds, and other materials which was based on foreign investment

- Nationalised foreign owned companies without compensation
- Foreign companies placed under control of his allies and family members (ensuring greater financial control)
- Introduced Zaireanisation (replacing foreigners with Zairian nationals) (good leadership – empowering locals and reversing paternalism)
- Zaireanisation led to corruption, nepotism, theft and mismanagement (possible because of no opposition)
- The economy was characterised by nepotism and elitism (Created big gap between the elite and ordinary citizens/rich and poor) (poor leadership)
- Weak economic policies led to the decline in the state of infrastructure such as roads etc. (no opposition to these polices)
- Mobutu created a kleptocracy – wherein a group of appointed public officials abused their position for financial gain
- Mobutu was forced to introduce Retrocession (return of foreign owners) (ineffectiveness of Zaireanisation) – His previous polices did not inspire people
- Very few foreign owners returned
- Congo's economy collapsed (poor economic policies) – Ineffectiveness of his one-party state
- Congo became dependent on foreign aid and investment, e.g. from the World Bank
- Mobutu remained as 'president for life' until his death in 2007
- Any other relevant response
- Conclusion: Candidates should tie their argument with a relevant conclusion   [50]
