SOUTH AFRICAN RAND SINKS AS MIDDLE EAST CONFLICT ADDS TO GLOBAL ECONOMIC UNCERTAINTY

The South African rand fell on Monday as the ongoing conflict in the Middle East rattled investors and added to global economic uncertainty.

At 0703 GMT the rand traded at 16.16 against the dollar about 1,4% down from its Friday close.

Over the weekend, the United States and Israel carried out major strikes on Iran that killed Supreme Leader Ayatollah Ali Khamenei. Iran has retaliated with missile and drone attacks across parts of the Middle East.

The dollar gained 0.3% against a basket of currencies, with gold - a major South African export - hitting its highest in more than four weeks.

"Although the U.S. is involved, and the Trump administration's stance on tariffs continues to undermine the USD's value, it remains a haven for investors seeking to shield themselves from the volatility that might follow this weekend's events," said ETM Analytics in a research note.

"Supporting the rand in this instance is the gold price, which has surged back towards its recent record highs," the note added.

Like other risk-sensitive currencies the rand often takes cues from global drivers such as U.S. policies in addition to domestic economic data.

QUESTION 4

4.1 Refer to the picture and comment below before answering the questions that follow.

TOURIST'S ONLINE REVIEW:

"It felt like my soul was being drained from my body. Witnessing the piles of hair, the shoes, the clothes, the baggage...walking through the hall with pictures of internees' faces - kept thinking I've seen them before. I felt nothing but sadness. Walking through the gas chamber was horrible - I couldn't wait to get out of there. Walking through Birkenau just thinking about the horrors taking place during WWII. During our drive back to Krakow, everyone was different than when we were driving to Auschwitz. No talking at all back to Krakow."
